

NOTHING.
STREET ART.
CHEAP PAPER.
NO COLOUR.
A NEW LIFE.
STILL HERE.

2007, all the daydreams are gone.

After arriving at Swalecliffe, a tiny town at the coast of England. Moran found himself having to re-evaluate his life and goals. His education, work and experience are now pointless in the face of poverty and new responsibilities.

To make money and cover expenses, he used cheap materials and sold local art on the street, once a drawing helped make the rent by pennies.

During this time, Aaron is diagnosed with psychosis.
